English is remotely: a challenge of modernity and prospect for the future

Many people who dream of learning English and develop their linguistic skills are wondering whether to trust online courses or better communication with teachers. If you are also interested in this question, then this article aims to eliminate all your doubts.

Features of distance learning in English lessons

Nowadays, distance learning English is becoming more common. This method has its advantages:

1. A large number of courses and course options. Distance learning English eliminates the need to choose the course of the course. Here, the main selection criterion is the course content.

2. Career growth and hobbies. Distance learning allows you to remain flexible because you do not need to rush to seek help from the English language teacher at a certain time. Distance learning allows you to highlight a convenient, mainly for your class time.

3. Environment. Distance courses of English provide for a special educational environment that best matches your needs, be it a personal room, an educational institution or cafe.

4. Study at your own pace. If you already have enough knowledge, the remote study of English can allow you to quickly go through the course. At full-time courses you will have to solve a few topics, other members of the group do not understand.

5. Letters and communication skills. Since all internet relationships are mainly carried out using letters, over time you can express your opinion in terms of vocabulary and grammar.

However, the medals have two sides, therefore there are also disadvantage learning English:

1. Social interaction. Remote English language training does not give listeners of permanent opportunities for social interaction. Although this type of interaction is very useful for oral language practices.

2. Problems of technical nature. Distance learning in English directly depends on the velocity of the Internet. For various technical problems, it is not always possible to perform homework on time, or it is impossible to contact the teacher to pass the task performed.

3. Motivation. Many people need «magic strikes», and in comfortable home it is difficult to self-organize and start studying.

Every year, distance learning is becoming increasingly popular: a large number of high-quality web resources are created that combine the functions of distance learning and online services around the clock.

From this point of view, Internet resources provide more efficient assistance to learn English. This method of organizing the educational process eliminates the problem of temporary differences, and students can always return to the previously covered exercises and materials, if the understanding of the meaning failed from the first time.

When remotely teaching the English language, each user first uses a special test proposed by the system to determine the level of its language. Then, given the knowledge that were discovered, there is a transition to the next stage of learning. At the end of each educational unit, the user also passes a test to determine the level of learning language.

You can undergo a distance learning English from scratch

So, remote English language training has many advantages. But that is not all. There is another important advantage – everyone can undergo a course from scratch! However, it is better to deal with a remote tutor first to understand the correct pronunciation of foreign words.

Generally speaking, we can say that online training and offline includes 3 common components: teachers, students and textbooks. Only the form of the material is changed, while the result remains unchanged.

While there are several ways to learn English remotely. But the most common – remote courses with a tutor on a fee. The interaction is carried out through the famous Skype Messenger.

The Internet school chooses such teachers in accordance with the wishes of students, so the educational process is not only effective, but also interesting. In this case, you can choose a teacher who owns the Ukrainian language (when learning a language from scratch, for example) and the native speaker (if your level is above average). In addition, the school will take into account your readiness to be familiar with the culture of a certain country/region, and will choose you exactly such a tutor, which will be a carrier of a specific adverb (British, American, Australian, etc.).

How to make distance learning English at home even more efficient

In order for the distance learning of the English language to bring its results and was the most efficient, online training and training with the tutor must be combined. It is important to understand that the best way to master by foreign language skills is the creation of the most favorable for these most favorable conditions.

In order to achieve this success, you should constantly practice all types of speech activities. To do this, you should combine such home learning methods:

- perform creative written tasks – write abstracts with elements of reasoning;
- audio lessons to view movies and listening songs;
- speak English with compatriots and foreigners (which are not native speakers);
- various types of learning readings;
- writing texts for various purposes (personal letters and official messages).

Remember, you have to go a long way to reach the top of the English language. To enlist the support of family members is a good idea.

Conclusions

Thus, distance learning in English provides for the need to adapt both from the student and from the remote teacher.

Personal approach to everyone is the main characteristic of distance learning. The English language teacher helps to select remote students precisely those classes that are accurate and contribute to the consolidation of the motivation of further learning language.
